The Keystones of the local bowling league easily defeated the East Ends last evening, winning all three games by good scores. The Keystones rolled splendidly, and in many respects the match was the most interesting yet pulled off. J. Reaney distinguished himself by making the high score and high average for the evening.

His high score was 205 and his average 177⅔. He also rolled 203 pins in the third game. The next match will be pulled off Monday evening between the Capitols and McGinleys. Last evening's score:

LUCE ELECTED LAST NIGHT.

Will Fill the Vacancy in Council Caused by the Resignation of F. W. Irwin.

J. D. Luce, the newly elected councilman in the First Ward is one of Monessen's pioneer citizens. He came here when there was but a handful of houses dotted over the hills ides, and engaged in the grocery business. Later he sold out and was engaged as bookkeeper for the Sheli Hardware Company until its dissolution. At present he is in the real estate business, being associated with his brothers W. W. and R. F. Luce.

J. D. LUCE.

It can be said of Mr. Luce that he is one of our best and most substantial citizens, honest, honorable and upright in his business dealings and is one of that class of men who is always willing and ever ready to assist in upbuilding the community of which he is a resident.

He is no politician and does not aim to make it a business or profession, and has never been identified with any ward heating factions.

He has pledged himself to support and help carry out the policies of the present council. He favors the opening of the street to the river, and such other issues as will result in making a greater Monessen. The people of the First Ward and the city in general will profit by his assistance in the administration of public affairs

Will Visit South America.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lamb will leave Monday, October 15, for Guatamala, South America, where they will spend two months with Mr. Lamb's brother, who is located there, and will visit several of the many places of interest. About ten days are required to make the trip, which is a most delightful one. The journey from the coas to Guatama'a, is also quite interesting as stages, burros and broncos, are the only modes of travel. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb expect to return some time late in December.

Will Remodle Barber Shop.

WEBSTER LADY PASSED AWAY

Died at Her Home Yesterday Afternoon at 3.30 O'clock After a Lingering Illness.

Mrs. Mary Speakman, wife of A. E Speakman, passed peacefully away yesterday afternoon at her home in Webster. Her death was due to heart failure from which disease she had been suffering over a year. She was taken worse about a week ago, since when she has been confined to her bed. Deceased was one of the most prominent residents of Webster having made her home there all her life and her death comes as a shock to the community. She was an active member of the First Presbyterian church of Webster and always took an interest in church work. Besides her friends, who are legion, there remains to mourn her loss a husband and two daughters, Alberta, aged 12 years and Flora, aged 11 years; also a sister, Mrs. John Tomer, of Webster and three brothers, Lewis and Preston Gillingham, of Donora and John Gillingham, of Allenport. The funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in Monongahela cemetery.

A BUSY SESSION OF COUNCIL LELD LAST NIGHT

Paving Ordinances for Cross Streets Passed Second Reading—J. D. Luce Elected Councilman in the First Ward—Trains Must Slow Up

The regular monthly meeting of council was held last night with all members present. Chairman Alcorn presided and after the reading and approval of the minutes of the previous meeting the regular order of business was taken up. A petition was read asking for a sewer on the alley between 12th and 14th streets and same was referred to the sanitary committee for investigation. A petition was read asking that the borough put down a sidewalk along the Park property from Schoonmaker avenue up Ninth street to McMahon avenue and same was referred to the street and road committee. An ordinance was introduced regulating the speed of trains within the city limits. The rate provided is eight miles per hour. A penalty was also attached for loud and shrill whistling. The ordinance passed on first reading and a motion was made to suspend rules, which was carried and it was then passed on second and final reading. The ordinance providing a penalty for the opening of paved streets was passed on second reading. The ordinances providing for the paving and grading and curbing of second street between Donner and Schoonmaker avenue, Ninth street and Tenth street between Donner and Schoonmaker avenue were passed on second reading and authorized to be published in to days papers.

The borough engineer reported that certain persons had refused to lay sidewalks on Schoonmaker avenue and council gave instructions to have the ordinance enforced. The burgess' report was accepted and ordered filed. Mr. Hileman reported the purchase of the lot at the intersection of Ninth street as instructed by council and that the deed would be ready in a few days. Mr. Cushing, chairman of the fire committee, stated that 500 feet of hose had been purchased at 70 cents per foot, and also a hose cart. Mr. Musick, chairman of the sanitary committee, recommended that council re-advertise for bids for the removal of garbage for the reason that no satisfactory bid had been received. The recommendation was adopted.

The matter of filling the vacant seat, created by the resignation of F. W. Irwin, was then taken up. J. D. Luce and L. X. Ely were nominated and a ballot was taken. Luce got five votes and Ely got three. Cushing then made a motion that Mr. Luce be unanimously elected and all voted, aye.

The engineer was instructed to place signs near the railroad at the city limits as a guide for trainmen. Warrants were then authorized drawn for the payment of bills and council adjourned to meet on the evening of October 19th.

Ministerial Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Ministerial Association will be held Monday morn at 10:30 o'clock in the M. E. church. The presence of every pastor is desired.

An ordinance authorizing the grading curbing and paving of that section of Ninth street lying between Donner avenue and Schoonmaker avenue in the Borough of Monessen, Westmoreland County, Pa., directing the Borough Engineer to prepare proper plans and specifications and authorizing the President and Secretary of Council, and Chairman of Streets and Roads Committee and Burgess to give all necessary legal notices to enter into contract for the construction of the same and providing for the expense thereof.

WHEREAS, Donner Avenue and Schoonmaker Avenue are paved and improved streets and a section of Ninth Street lying between said Donner Avenue and Schoonmaker Avenue are unimproved and in two hundred ten (210) feet in length and—

WHEREAS, it is desired to grade, pave and curb that section of Ninth street lying between the said Donner and Schoonmaker Avenues in accordance with the act of May 31, 1897, and its supplements and assess the damages and benefits as provided therein.

SECTION 1. Now, therefore, be it ordained and enacted by the Borough of Monessen in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same that that section of Ninth Street in the Borough of Monessen, Westmoreland County, Pa, be graded curbed and paved in the following manner and along the route hereinafter set forth:—Beginning at the south line of Donner avenue and extending a distance of two hundred ten (210) feet to the North property line of Schoonmaker Avenue in the Borough of Monessen, Westmoreland County, Pa, the said section of Ninth Street shall be graded, curbed and paved along the route laid out and established on the official plan of streets of the Borough of Monessen, on file in the office of the Borough Engineer

SECTION 2. That the Borough Engineer and Committee on Streets and Roads prepare and they are hereby directed to prepare proper plans and specifications for curbing, grading and paving the aforesaid section of Ninth Street between the points above set forth, to give all legal notices and to advertise for sealed proposals for the construction of said grading, curbing and paving in accordance with said plans and specifications.

SECTION 3. That the Streets and Roads Committee, President and Secretary of Town Council and Burgess, upon the acceptance of the Borough of any bid or bids for grading, curbing and paving with block, brick or stone of the said section of Tenth Street between the points aforesaid, shall execute and deliver proper contracts for completion of the same in accordance with the proposals accepted and plans and specifications adopted as aforesaid.

SECTION 4. That the costs and expenses of grading, curbing and paving of that section of Tenth Street between the points aforesaid be assessed and collected as provided by the Act of Assembly.

SECTION 5. That all ordinances or parts thereof inconsistent herewith be, and the same are, hereby repealed.

If You Suffer with Rheumatism

Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy Will Bring the Utmost Relief that Medicine Can.

The one remedy which many physicians rely upon to free the system of the Rheumatic Poisons which are the cause of all Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Gout, is DR. SHOOP'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY. Dr. Shoop spent twenty years in experimenting before he discovered the combined chemicals which made possible one almost always certain cure for Rheumatism, etc. Not that DR. SHOOP'S RHEUMATIC REMEDY can turn bony joints into flesh again—that is impossible. But it can and will drive from the blood the poisons which caused the pain and swelling. And then that is the end of the pain and swelling—the end of the suffering—the end of Rheumatism. This remedy never fails where a cure is possible. It is now put up in tablet or liquid form—ask for either. You who have suffered and are suffering today from pains and aches which you know to be Rheumatism; you who experience lameness or twinges of pain in damp weather; you who easily become stiff and lame without apparent cause—just try DR. SHOOP'S RHEUMATIC CURE. It is just the kind of a remedy that accomplishes results. Sold and recommended by

Gentlemen: I bought three bottles of your medicine from my druggist. The medicine rendered me very good service, but I am sorry to say that the druggists here are all sold out of your medicine. I should have bought six bottles instead of three. I will gladly take six bottles of the Nervine and Blood Tonic, and request that you write me, if you are able to read this, for I am rather old to write. I have suffered six years from NERVOUS TROUBLE, caused by a fall, and my whole body remained in a tremble, but no pain. Every doctor I consulted failed to help me, and I was compelled to give up all housework. Then I read your advertisement and bought your medicine, and almost immediately after commencing its use I was a new woman. I hope you will write me at once, and tell me how much money I must send, as I am anxious to get to using your medicine again soon. With most hearty regards, I remain,

TRIUMPH OF WORTH IS WELL EVIDENCED IN EDWIN S. STUART

A Famous Journalist's Story of the Rise of a Poor Boy to High Public Honor.

"NEVER MADE A PROMISE THAT WAS NOT FULFILLED"

Emerged From Trying Term of Office With Echoing Plaudits of a City.

There was no more aggressive supporter of the fusion state ticket and the City Party movement in Philadelphia last fall than the Philadelphia "Evening Bulletin." Its editor-in-chief, William Perrine, author of the famous "Penn" comments upon men and measures in that independent journal, gave this word picture of the Republican nominee for governor in his characteristic, frank and manly manner, shortly after the selection of the Republican standard-bearer:

"At the close of the gubernatorial campaign four years ago it was observed that the Republican candidate came out of it without having been compelled even once to defend his personal character. Amidst all the gibes that were cast at Judge Pennypacker and all the controversies over his political status, his record as a man was proof against reproach. It is altogether certain that his successor as a gubernatorial candidate will repeat this experience in the coming campaign. For the life of Edwin S. Stuart in Philadelphia from his boyhood has been so clear, clean, simple and open that it would be hard even for the adroitest of slanderers to fasten upon him the suspicion of an illicit or disreputable act. In his early manhood he framed for himself a code of upright and honorable dealing in his business ambitions and in his daily relations to men; he had a sterling reputation for his squareness and sincerity among those who knew him when he was only in his teens, and in the course of the more than 30 years of his comings and goings among the people, and largely in public life, none has been able to note in him any essential deviation from the principles and the habits which marked him in the humble beginnings of his career.

The Man In the Making.

"When as a lad he had hardly ceased doing chores in the old Leary book store at Fifth and Walnut streets, he was almost as big and strapping a fellow physically as he is now. At 17 or 18 he had the frame and girth of a six-footer, the level-headed sense of judgment of a veteran in the book business when he would go to Thomas' auction rooms on Fourth street, for example, to do the buying for his house, and an unusual facility, for a youth, of knowing how to hold his tongue and yet winning friends with perfect ease. It is sometimes the habit of those who criticise him to call him 'over-discreet' or 'too non-committal.' But this sort of prudence is not a merely political trait or the result of political life. Caution is an instinct with him; it was natural to him when he was earning his $3 or $4 a week and carrying his coffee every morning from his downtown home to warm it up in the middle of the day at the Fallon shoe store, and when at night time the row of tall boards which encased the cheap stalls on the outside walls were fastened together, young Stuart was as careful to see that they were made quite as secure in protecting the 5 and 10-cent stock as he was that the rarest editions on the inside should be safeguarded from theft or fire. And yet with all his circumspection in speech there wasn't a more cheerful or more sunny-faced lad in the neighborhood. He worked all day long and frequently well into the night as if he never knew what it was to be tired, and although he was singularly free of the loose or hurtful habits which most lads contract in the growing age, no one thought of associating him with the idea of a milksop or a pretender. To everybody about Fifth and Walnut streets he was 'Ed,' 'Ned' or 'Eddie,' and even then there was a sort of intuition among the denizens of the corner that he had the making of a somebody in him.

"Mr. Stuart was at one time, when still young, a Sunday school teacher. Some years ago he told me how amused and pleased he was one day in finding among the books which came to his store on Ninth street a copy of a little Testament which contained the inscription that he had written on its fly-leaf in the early '70's when he presented it to one of his pupils. In his relations to his mother, who was of sturdy, religious stock, he was a signal example of the loyalty and gratitude of the son who honors the chief author of his being; he lived as much for her as for himself; the pride which she might find in his ambitions was not the least of his motives in courting public advancement, and when he had almost reached the mayoralty of his native city, the sorest blow of his life was that death should rob him of her in their little home on Tenth street, and that he should be cut off, on the eve of his triumph, from sharing it with her. Stuart had little schooling except what he got in the Southwest Grammar school, and the education which he gave himself was largely the result of what he read at Leary's in spare moments, or in his winter evening hours at home. But he was emphatically a specimen of what we sometimes call 'good mothers' sons,' and the moral stamina and Scotch-Irish sense in the man came to him through her, in a domestic atmosphere of frugality, thrift and those simple virtues that are chastened by patient toil in the face of suffering or sorrow.

A Character That Told.

"It is to the character which was thus formed in Stuart that the offices and the honors which have been given him in Philadelphia are primarily due. His nomination for governor of Pennsylvania, like his election to the presidency of the Young Republicans when, a quarter of a century ago it became a stepping-stone of his career, his election to select council, his election to the mayoralty, his election to the presidency of the Union League, his appointment to the board of city trusts, and his appointment, which he declined, some months ago, to the reconstructed board of education, not to speak of the proffers which have been made to him at various times of other offices, have almost invariably been the outcome of respect for, or confidence in, his character. That the favorable impression which a man of his unusually large and forceful physique makes upon the public mind enters to some extent into this disposition to recognize him is not to be doubted, for Stuart has an external appearance which ambitious men may envy. But this is a comparative trifle when compared with that sort of impression which is made year in and year out, in little things as well as in big things, by sobriety, and steadiness, and dignity yet simplicity of conduct, and immunity from scandal, and square dealing, and charity of thought, and truthfulness of speech. Thus there is not a division of the humblest citizens of the 26th ward in which the name of Edwin S. Stuart is not trusted today as a household word, and often it has been known to be commended by workingmen as a model to their boys; on the other hand, there is not a member of the Union League who feels that its honor before the nation will ever be tarnished by any act of his while he is in its presidency. Nor is there any semblance of moral ostentation in his character, none of that affectation or self-consciousness or preachiness which sometimes imparts a smugness or disagreeable stiffness to the intrinsic quality of a good man. The instinct of rational fellowship in him is strong; no other public man in Philadelphia probably has more friends or acquaintances to salute him when he comes down Chestnut street, and in his intercourse there is that abundance of heartiness which comes from seemingly perfect health, a kindly disposition and the frankness of a clean nature. There is no discrimination in his conduct, whether he meets a millionaire or a coal heaver, and there is no trace of a sign in his manner or his manners that the recognition which has come to him in securing some of the most coveted prizes of ambition has spoiled him in the sense of making him forgetful of his struggling days or of turning his head. In fact, it would be hard to find among the noted characters of Philadelphia a man less suggestive of anything like vanity or self-approbation.

Temperate in Word and Deed.

"The chief weaknesses attributed to Stuart are want of positiveness, slowness in reaching conclusions, and excess of amiability. They are the same weaknesses that McKinley's critics passed upon him up to the time he went into the presidency, and the Stuart temperament is undoubtedly a kindred one to the 'McKinley temperament' in both its personal and political aspect. In all his career in Philadelphia I do not recall that he ever felt himself publicly moved to abuse a man or to speak harshly of one, however much he might condemn a vice or a wrong, and in his private conversation there is the same abstinence from merely personal reprobation. He is a believer in the wisdom of the motto that haste makes waste, but if he is slow to reach his conclusions he sticks to them when he gets there. From his point of view a man in office is not so much the leader of the people as he is the instrument of the people, and it is less his business to form public opinion than to obey public opinion. The real test of the usefulness of a public man consists in the substantial and lasting betterment which he produces for his community, and yet there are in Philadelphia some men who with notable reptuations for being 'positive' could not stand that test and whose vigor of affirmation is sometimes hardly more than a windy, worthless verbosity.

An Eventful Term.

"Thus Stuart, when he became mayor of Philadelphia, made few promises, and, such as they were, they were simply and carefully expressed. But the city and its material improvements advanced during the four years of his term; the average of the personnel of his administration in point of character and efficiency was creditable, and no responsible opponent, however bitter, ventured to advance even a suspicion dishonorable to its head. At all times he was accessible to all citizens, and none whose complaint might be worth making ever suggested that he did not have an opportunity for fair play and courteous hearing. The mayor, it is true, was always reluctant to make a promise, but when one was made it was kept. Politically the Combine of Martin and Porter flourished during his term, but there was comparative peace in the politics of Philadelphia. Stuart made the effort, but failed in it, of taking the police out of politics.

Indeed, at the start it looked as if his administration might be a wreck. His first director of public safety was proved to have been a thief, but the mayor promptly got rid of him. The city treasury had been robbed right and left by Bardsley, but the mayor lost no time in getting his experts into the office and putting Bardsley under arrest. The Queen Lane reservoir was charged with being infected by the rankest jobbery, but the chief accuser broke down in a court of justice and an equity suit was dismissed from consideration by the judges. When the first boulevard or parkway bill passed councils, largely at the instance of the Pennsylvania railroad, Stuart vetoed it, but he took the ground substantially that it was doubtful whether the city could afford it, and that the majority of the people, as was then true, were probably opposed to it. This subjected him to criticism as a man who was not bold and progressive enough to lead in the making of a great municipal improvement, and the same kind of criticism was directed against him with much vigor by the Traction company or its spokesmen when he halted the originay trolley bills, although there was no doubt that the majority of the people were against them also. But the outcome of Stuart's action was the most valuable concession the railway interests have ever made to the city.

"This was the acceptance of the obligation to put asphalt improvements on the streets which they occupied and to maintain the pavements; and it has been chiefly under the operations and effects of that covenant in the past dozen years or more that Philadelphia became one of the best-paved cities in the United States. The reclamation of Broad street as a highway was another of his special policies, as was also the asphalting of small or comparatively obscure streets in the poor and congested quarters, so that neighborhood cleanliness and sanitation might be advanced. But the foremost act of an administration which was fruitful of the well-distributed improvement that counts in detail, was the initiation of the movement for abolishing the grade crossings on the main line of the Reading railway and the construction of the subway on Pennsylvania avenue.

Set a Standard.

"The comparative rapidity with which Mayor Stuart and the late Edward M. Paxson, as the chief representative of the Reading, came into an agreement on a problem which was generally thought to be entirely beyond the reach of immediate solution, has been in striking contrast with the delay of years over the Ninth street crossings. Stuart managed his end of the case with admirable patience, tactfulness and persistence, without fussiness or the slightest effusion of promises; and when the undertaking, which began under his administration in co-operation with the company, was completed, there were not only no jobs charged against it, but the expenditure was actually less than the amount of money appropriated.

"When he went out of the mayoralty it was with no general lessening of the personal respect which he had when he went into it, but which it had been the lot of most mayors, sometimes undeservedly, to lose on making their exit. Stuart's experience in that respect, however, was like this—that there was a disposition all around among thoughtful men to put upon his head and not his heart the responsibility for his errors of commission or of omission and to greet him as one who had done his part honestly and with clean hands. The citizens' dinner which was given to him when he retired to private life was one of those appreciations which really mean something. Its guests were made up of men of all parties and various representatives of religion like Archbishop Ryan, Bishop Whitaker and the present Bishop McVickar; Charles Emory Smith performed his happiest offices as an orator, and John Wanamaker likened the young mayor, I think—for he was then but 42 after his four-years' term—to a sort of Dick Whittington, of Philadelphia.

A Tribute to Worth.

"As a matter of fact, Stuart formed an ambition for that office in the days when it was first occupied by Stokley and when he himself had not become a voter, and it is the only office, except his seat in councils years ago, that he has deliberately and openly planned to secure. The self-restraint which he has time and again exhibited in putting away from him the baits which politicians have cast in his direction has been marked. Thus it might have been possible for him to have made a dash for the governorship while he was mayor, when various plans to head off Hastings were on foot and when all the bootlickers of politics who ever gather around a mayor were urging him to let his administration be set up in his behalf. But Stuart, with all his amiability, can tell a hawk from a handsaw in politics as quickly as most of the experts, never lost an hour's sleep over the affair, eventually put his foot on it quietly, and thereby removed from Hastings' path the only formidable obstruction that might have been set in his way. And now, in the fullness of time, with a new political generation coming into the field, and with Quay and half the other old leaders dead or nearly dead, the nomination comes to him without the lifting of a finger on his part and with the expectation that it will meet the popular sentiment of the hour.

"Whatever else it may or may not be, politically, it is personally at least a striking tribute to the worth of character.

PENN."

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
To find relief and cure?
No reason why any reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

AUNT CYNTHIA

[Original.]

As Reginald Crane and his newly wedded wife stepped on the train to go to his home a telegram was handed him. A cloud gathered on his brow.

"What is it?" asked his bride anxiously.

"Uncle Frank is dead."

"Well?"

"That means trouble for us. Aunt Cynthia has been very near to me. I am her only near kin. And I must give her a home."

"I have heard that your aunt is a delightful old lady."

"She is, but she has suffered much, and her nerves are unstrung. Uncle Frank understood her condition, and now that he is gone I alone understand it. He as her husband and by disposition was well fitted to bear with her, to comfort and encourage her. For this she will now look to me."

Friends, relatives, connections, waited expectantly to discover if Reginald would provide a home for his aunt They said nothing to him, but the women cackled among themselves. They did not doubt that Reginald would do his duty, but they wondered if his wife would permit him to do it. The young couple satisfied the family's expectations by inviting Aunt Cynthia to make her home with them, and she removed, bag and baggage, to their house. She was naturally frank, impulsive, generous—indeed, among those who were not constantly with her was very popular. She stepped from her own household, which she had managed for forty years, to the position of guest in the household of Martha Crane.

"She'll make it hot for us both." remarked the young man to himself, but to his wife he said he sincerely hoped the old lady would be happy in her new home and make them happy too. The Van Winkle family, who were most interested in Aunt Cynthia's welfare, waited and watched to see how their relative would be treated, especially by Martha. It was not long before they learned from the old lady herself that, while Reginald was the perfection of kindness, he had made a very unfortunate marriage. Aunt Cynthia was one of those persons who must have confidants, and, honestly believing that she was being very badly treated by her nephew's wife, she poured a tale of woe into the ears of every relative. Her defense of Reginald counted for nothing with these people, because they said he knew when he married Martha Grant that his uncle would not live long and his aunt would need a home; therefore he should not have married at all. This was the position taken by the Van Winkle family, and Peter Van Winkle, when the old lady one day flounced out of her nephew's house and vowed she would no longer live with a woman who persisted in ill treating her, cut Reginald on the street. Other relatives followed suit, and it was not long before the young couple were estranged from every one of the husband's family.

A singular feature of discord is that it is catching. After an explosion with Aunt Cynthia the nerves of the husband and wife were so rasped that they at times fell to quarreling. Every couple has its own troubles to meet without being called upon to suffer needless complications, and the Cranes had theirs. The two together so wore on them that they were at times in but little better condition than Aunt Cynthia. So it got out, through Aunt Cynthia, that Martha Crane was a shrew and poor dear Reggie was having a terrible life with her. This story was confirmed when at last Reginald broke down with nervous prostration Peter Van Winkle heard of it on his way to prayer meeting and mentioned it in his address to the heavenly throne, calling the Lord's attention to the consequences of persons not doing their duty.

Reginald got better after awhile, but the aunt, not finding another home suited to her taste, came back and settled again with the Cranes. Mrs. Crane became more and more rasped, losing flesh all the while, till at last one spring she was obliged to go into the country early and recruit. Aunt Cynthia begged to go, too, but by this time Reginald and Martha, who saw that unless they could get a rest for a time they would both have to go to an asylum, flatly demurred.

"Why not spend your summer with the Van Winkles?" they suggested.

But the Van Winkles had their plans all formed, and these did not include Aunt Cynthia. They all went to their country places and each wrote to the other: "Just think of poor Aunt Cynthia getting through the long summer as best she can. I would like to tear the hearts—if they had hearts—out of her nephew and his vixen wife."

Not only did the summer plans of the relatives not include Aunt Cynthia, but when they were at home their invitations to her were limited She was handy with her needle, and whenever sewing was to be done it was "Dear Aunt Cynthia, come and lunch with us. Come at 9 a. m. and spend the day." Aunt Cynthia never suspected that she was needed for a purpose.

When Aunt Cynthia died the relatives concluded to forgive the Cranes, both husband and wife. Peter Van Winkle, the next time he met Reginald, advanced with outstretched hand. Reginald walked by him with eyes in front, and when he met the other Van Winkles he did the same by them.

"Why," asked a mutual friend, "don't you accept the olive branch? Have they treated you so badly?"

"No," replied Reginald; "they treated my aunt badly."
